

An Interesting Old Person

Describe an old person who you think is interesting.

You should say:

who this person is

how you met (or how you know) this person

what you do together and explain why you think this person is interesting.

Part 3

Young-Old Relationships

- What are the main differences between young people and old people?
- What aspects of the elderly do you think are most interesting?
- What do you think happens when we show an interest in another person?
- Do you think old people should live with their families?
- Do you think old people and young people can become friends?
- Is this phenomenon common in your country?
- Do you think old people and young people can share the same interests or hobbies?
- Can you give any examples of interests or hobbies that some young people have in common with some old people?
- Can you explain why many young people do not find old people to be interesting?

- In general, what do you think leads to a person understanding another person?
- Do you think young people are too self-centred?
- Would you say young people today are more polite towards old people than in the past?

The Young and Old Teaching Each Other

- What do you think are the main difference between the elderly and young people when learning new things?
- Do you think it's possible for young people and the elderly to teach each other things?
- Can you give any examples of that?
- What skills do you think they can teach each other?
- Do you think elderly people could learn to play computer games?
- Can you explain why not many young people teach old people about the latest pop music?
