

Good News

Describe a piece of good news you heard (e.g., from TV or the internet)

You should say:

where you heard it

when you heard it

what it was about

and explain why you think it was good news.

Part 3

The News in Your Country

- Can you give any more examples of news that could be called, "good news"?
- Are there different kinds (categories) of news in your country?
- What kind of news are most people in your country most concerned about?
- Which types of people pay more attention to domestic (national) news than to foreign news?
- Do average people in your country care much about foreign news?
- Are elderly and young people usually interested in the same news?
- Are there any types of people who care little about the news?
- Can you suggest why some people are interested in bad news?
- Why do many people like to talk about bad news?
- Would you say people are being given (exposed to) too much news nowadays?

- Can you explain why some people put news stories on social media?
- How can people distinguish between false news and genuine news?
- (Similar to above) How can people trust that the news they hear or read is true (or accurate)?
- How do you think the way we get the news will (or, might) change in the future?

School Students and the News

- How do school-age people learn about (or get) news?
- Do you think school children should be paying attention to the news?
- (Similar to above) Do you think school children should be watching the news?
- Do you think they should hear (or, should be exposed to) bad news?
- Do school teachers guide students to understand the news?
